Brittany Bode is a Master's level certified teacher that specializes in reading challenges, including dyslexia, even when many other reading programs haven't worked. She is reading specialist and dyslexia specialist that has spread her career as a classroom teacher to a broader scale where she can reach students all over the world using modern technology and a program that she swears by called the Barton Reading & Spelling System. Brittany is certified to teach Early Childhood Education, Elementary Education, and holds additional Endorsements in Structured English Immersion and Reading and a Master's Degree in Elementary Education. Brittany is a member of the International Dyslexia Association as well as her local AZ Branch.

She has been invited and a key vendor and keynote speaker at various local vendor events and has been a guest speaker on various podcasts to spread awareness, especially during Dyslexia Awareness month. She also spreads dyslexia vigilance through local public libraries and local events she's created free of charge to the community to help educate, support, and create hope in the lives of struggling readers and their families. Brittany also consistently collaborates and mentors other business owners that utilize the Barton Reading & Spelling System in groups online, individually for people undiagnosed or diagnosed with dyslexia and parents and teachers of those students. She has had tremendous success helping students make significant progress overcoming their reading, writing, and spelling challenges and improve their overall academic experience while scaffolding a higher level of intrinsic motivation and self-esteem.

Many of the students Brittany tutors have struggled and even failed repeatedly, but have succeeded once they began with Brittany. The Barton Reading and Spelling System is a research-based, Orton-Gillingham, multisensory, explicit and systematic phonics program that teaches people with dyslexia how to read, write, and spell. Many of her thriving students have previously failed in many other reading interventions they've tried such as school, in title 1 reading or commercialized tutoring companies like SCORE or Sylvan.

Brittany has tutored students in Oklahoma, Chicago, San Francisco and Phoenix and the success stories show her progress every step of the way. Brittany is always looking to facilitate learning and create dyslexia awareness for struggling readers and their support system. She understands and implements consistent intervention in her private tutoring practice to students' support team (including but not limited to parents and teachers) is key and on a wider scope to the community in which encouragement of awareness and a thorough understanding of dyslexia is in motion.
